

LEGAL INTERNSHIPS

New Economy Project is currently accepting legal intern applications for the Fall 2021 semester. New Economy Project works with community groups to build an economy that works for all New Yorkers, rooted in racial and gender justice, cooperation, neighborhood equity, and ecological sustainability. Law interns contribute to the organization's direct legal services and impact litigation, coalition organizing, policy advocacy, and effective communications, and learn about advancing economic justice campaigns to achieve systemic change. Working in a collaborative environment, law interns gain direct exposure to an array of advocacy and organizing strategies, and typically work on a broad range of projects. Previous law interns have, for example:

- Staffed our legal hotline for New Yorkers harmed by discriminatory and abusive financial practices;
- Completed legal research and writing to advance our litigation and policy campaigns;
- Conducted comparative legal research relating to community land trusts, public banking, community development financial institutions, predatory payday lending, and more;
- Facilitated know-your-rights workshops and community legal clinics for grassroots groups and their members; and
- Drafted administrative complaints, filed with city, state, and federal regulatory agencies.

To apply, email your resume and cover letter to: hire@neweconomynyc.org. We encourage people of color, women, people with disabilities, LGBTQ candidates, immigrants, and people from low-income backgrounds to apply. Spanish-language fluency is a plus. The organization offers semester-long and summer legal internships. For more information, visit www.neweconomynyc.org.
